> April 1, 2557 Master Chief's Journal

I always thought about killing Truth, and how much praise I would get, but over the years of fighting it's not worth it any more. Have you ever killed someone and not regretted doing it? That's how I feel every day out on the field. When you're the only SPARTAN II left from the attack on Reach its pretty hard not to think about the friends you've lost and will not have back until you die and hopefully are forgiven for the atrocities of war.

End Passage

"Chief, on the bridge ASAP!"

"Yes Sir!"

Now what, if it's all that protocol stuff, then damn, I must be hard to kill!

(Flashback as Chief remembers the first time anyone said that to him)_

"_Chief! Can you hear me? It's Cortana! Chief!_"

As Chief regains consciousness he slowly sits up, he's on a metal table and it looks like its in the Med Bay.

"_Good news first."_

"_Chief, you are damn hard to kill!"_

"_I already knew that." It was the truth; I was trained to be invincible._

"_You seem fit to go on the field again, so we are going to send you to the Reach System."_

Home sweet home!

"_We are going to send you down in a Pelican."_

"_My Pelican or your junky ones?"_

"_That doesn't matter, because we got some Covenant to get through first_

_(End of flashback) _

An alarm sounds "Alert! Alert! Covenant Ships inbound! Battle stations!"

_The fun never ends! _I thought.

"Next wave coming in! Its going to get hot!"

>This short was written many years ago by me when Halo 3 was very popular. I knew about this site just after writing it and never got around to uploading it, so here it is! I hope you enjoyed my work as much as I enjoyed writing it!
